

Robert Buresh, PhD, PAS

Executive Manager, North America Technical Services

Dr. Bob Buresh is responsible for leading the strategic direction of the North America Technical Services group and aligning them with the corporate Novus strategy. In this role, he serves as the key cross-functional link between the sales organization and R&D for all species. Prior to his current role, Bob served as the Technical Service Lead for the Poultry Technical Team and also spent time as the North America Poultry Sales Manager.

Previous work experience includes senior nutritionist and poultry technical service roles with Purina Mills and Eastern Minerals. He spent the majority of his career as director of poultry nutrition for Tyson, where he was responsible for establishing nutritional programs and performance for both broilers and breeders, evaluating ingredients, and coordinating research conducted both internally and externally.

Bob earned his bachelor's degree in animal and food industries, and his master's in poultry nutrition and management from Clemson University. He then received his doctorate in poultry nutrition from the University of Florida, with his dissertation focusing on the nutritional inter-relationships of antibiotics and nutritional requirements of poultry.

Bob resides in Clemson, South Carolina, and serves as secretary for the U.S. branch of the World's Poultry Science Association. He is a former executive secretary for the Southern Poultry Science Association and a former director for the Poultry Science Association.